Estill will remain dry county

FATE OF ALCOHOL SALES DECIDED BY ONLY 50-VOTE MARGIN

By WHITNEY LEGGETT
CV&T News Editor

By a margin of only 50 votes, Estill County voters elected to remain a dry county in Tuesday's special vote.

A group of citizens gathered in the halls of the Estill County Courthouse as County Clerk Sherry Fox announced that 1,569 voters had elected to allow legal alcohol sales in the county while 1,619 voters voted to keep the county dry.

As the votes were tallied citizens became concerned when the numbers before the absentee ballots were added reflected an even smaller margin. 113 absentee ballots were submitted. With 47 voters electing for alcohol sales and another 66 electing to remain dry, the absentee ballots sealed the fate of the special election.

Six of the 15 precincts had more votes for a wet county. Several of the totals reflected differences of single digits. In the Cow Creek precinct there was a one-vote margin with 88 voters electing to remain dry and 87 voters electing to allow alcohol sales.

Precincts with most voters electing to remain dry were Schoolhouse, Estill Springs, Ravenna, West Irvine, Millers Creek, Cow Creek, Cedar Grove, South Irvine and Drowning Creek.

Precincts with most voters electing to allow alcohol sales were Courthouse, West Lawn, White Oak, Forks, Barnes Mountain and Red Lick.

Paul Groves, president of the Ministerial Association, said the organization is happy with the results of the election but there is concern with how close the votes were.

"Naturally, we are glad that we're staying dry," he said. "But, we're sad that the community is split."

He said the fact that the margin was so small makes it hard to be a winner.

"It was so close that I really feel for the other side," he said.

Groves said despite the very different opinions on the matter, he thought the election went very well.

"It's been a great election," he said. "More than alcohol and my opinion of alcohol, I love this county. I just hope we can work together to make it better."

Irvine council hears fairness ordinance concern

By WHITNEY LEGGETT
CV&T News Editor

In its first meeting of the year, the Irvine City Council heard concerns from a citizen about groups advocating for fairness ordinances in cities in central and eastern Kentucky.

Rainy Baker told the council she and her husband, Bruce, have been Estill County residents since 1999. She shared with the council news coverage of a business in Lexington that is in the middle of a lawsuit because of refusing service based on the company's religious stance.

Hands On Originals, a printing company, is being sued by the Gay and Lesbian Service Organization (GLSO).

The GLSO alleges the company discriminated against them when it refused to print t-shirts for the Fifth Annual Lexington Gay Pride Festival.

The Lexington Fayette Urban County Human Rights Commission has sided with the GLSO setting up a public hearing for the two groups.

Baker asked the council to be aware that when fairness ordinances or the like are established in communities, it is often the Christian business owners that suffer. She read excerpts of new material and opinion columns stating that Christian business owners are forced to act against their

Grand jury returns indictments for 16

By WHITNEY LEGGETT
CV&T News Editor

The Estill County Grand Jury returned indictments for 16 people last week. Among the indictments were nine for individuals who are charged with making a false statement to prevent a reduction in benefits.

Andy Myers, 35, of Ironworks Road, is charged with making a false statement to prevent a reduction of benefits over $100. Between February 2008 and January 2009, Myers knowingly received unemployment benefits from the Kentucky Division of Unemployment while working for Tri-State Roofing. This resulted in an overpayment of $15,652.

April Degre, 31, of McKee, is charged with two counts of making a false statement to prevent a reduction of benefits over $100. Between March 2009 and February 2011, Degre failed to report the self-employment income of a household member while she was receiving SNAP benefits and Medicaid benefits. This resulted in an overpayment of $20,278.69.

Jo A. Mulberry, 26, of Dugans Lane in Ravenna, is charged with making a false statement to prevent a reduction of benefits over $100. Between February 2010 and February 2011, Mulberry incorrectly reported her household earned and unearned income while she was receiving SNAP benefits, resulting in an overpayment of $4,952 in benefits.

Christy Westerfield, 33, of Meadowlark Bottom, is charged with two counts of making a false statement to prevent a reduction of benefits over $100. Between August 2011 and February 2012, Westerfield failed to report that her husband had several employers and this income was not included in her case while she was receiving SNAP and Medicaid benefits. Westerfield received an overpayment of $9,390.72 as a result of this misrepresentation of income.

Tonia Delisio, 28, of Stanton, is charged with two counts of making a false statement to prevent a reduction of benefits over $100. Between May

CV&T celebrating 40 years

CV&T STAFF REPORT

In 2003, H.B. Elkins, Citizen Voice & Times editor at the time, wrote that the paper had reached a milestone in local journalism history as Publisher Guy Hatfield celebrated the 30th anniversary of his newspaper.

A decade later, the paper has reached yet another milestone. This time the publisher is Teresa Hatfield-Barger and the editor is Whitney Leggett. The newspaper staff is celebrating 40 years of service to Estill County and its communities.

Stamp price increases Jan. 27

The cost of stamps will increase again in the new year.

The U.S. Postal Service (USPS) announced late last year that the price of a stamp will increase by a penny. The increase, which makes a stamp 46 cents now, will be effective Jan. 27.

USPS is issuing, for the first time, a global forever stamp that would cost $1.10 and applies to first-class letters being sent anywhere across the globe.

This increase follows a one-cent increase on the price of stamps last year.

According to MSN Money, the USPS can only increase the price of the stamp along with inflation, 2.6 percent.

Other reports indicate USPS officials have asked Congress for special permission to incur a five-cent increase to avoid a $15 million loss on the part of the postal service.

At press time, Congress had taken no action on the requested increase.

Publisher concerned with carrying on legacy of her late husband

By WHITNEY LEGGETT
CV&T News Editor

All Teresa Hatfield-Barger needed to hear was “You can do it.” Those four words set into motion her nearly eight-year reign as the publisher of the Citizen Voice & Times that has brought her to today: when she, her staff and the community celebrate 40 years of the local newspaper.

Teresa said her years as publisher have been challenging, full of learning experiences and rewarding.

Most of all, she said she is proud to carry on the legacy of her late husband, Guy Hatfield, the original publisher of the paper.

When Guy passed away in February 2005, Teresa was left with a difficult task. She was working at a car dealership in Madison County but had no intentions of letting the paper be sold or go under. She quickly discovered she wouldn’t be able to act as publisher and hold onto her other job.

“I was getting all kinds of calls everyday from the staff asking me what should be done about different things,” she said. “I realized I needed to have someone at the paper who I trusted to make those decisions.”

She set out to find a publisher who would meet the standards she knew her husband would have set. But, she found that to be difficult, to say the least.

After contacting the Kentucky Press Association (KPA) and other industry professionals, Teresa realized that person may not exist.

“I called KPA and finally someone there told me, ‘You’re looking for another Guy Hatfield, and you’re not gonna find him,’” Teresa said.

It was at this point Teresa was lost for answers to her problem. That was until she contacted a friend in the industry who gave her a little encouragement.

“She said, ‘You can do it,’” Teresa said. “I had never heard anyone say that before. No one had ever told me that I was capable of running the paper.”

All it took was this little boost of confidence for Teresa to begin to believe she was called to act as publisher after Guy’s passing.

“I realized that I knew much more about working at the paper than I did anything else I might pursue,” she said.

Teresa worked for the paper during the first 10 years of the Hatfield’s marriage. She took a 15-year hiatus from the job before becoming publisher, but she said that didn’t mean she was clueless about what to do.

For many years the Hatfields lived in the old Colonial Hotel, the building where the CV&T offices were located. Teresa was constantly exposed to different aspects of the paper, and without realizing it, her years spent married to Guy were preparing her for her own career in journalism.

Raising her children around the newspaper offices, living in the offices and her marriage to Guy allowed Teresa to bear firsthand witness to the many changes the industry has gone through in the last decade.

She remembers the time of CompuGraphic machines, the first Apple computers, cutting and pasting to layout the paper, developing photos in the dark room in the basement and the difficulty journalists faced with communicating.

“We didn’t have faxes or cell phones,” she said. “If I was going to sell an ad in Richmond, I had to be completely prepared or else that meant another trip.”

She said the lack of communication technology made the journalists of the time’s job much more difficult than it is today.

“These days, journalists have much easier access to information with the internet and cell phones,” she said. “But there are also a lot more privacy laws and regulations that have changed a lot about newspapers.”

She recalled the years when the paper would print hospitals admissions and discharges.

“It was really easy to just call and ask for an update on someone that had been hurt in an accident or something,” she said. “Now you can’t do that.”

Teresa said the changing times have been challenging for her. During Teresa’s time as publisher an emphasis has been placed on providing an online news product. She helped establish the newspaper’s first website in 2006.

She has also been around to see many staff members come and go.

“I was really in my comfort zone at first,” she said. “I knew all of the staff and I trusted them.”

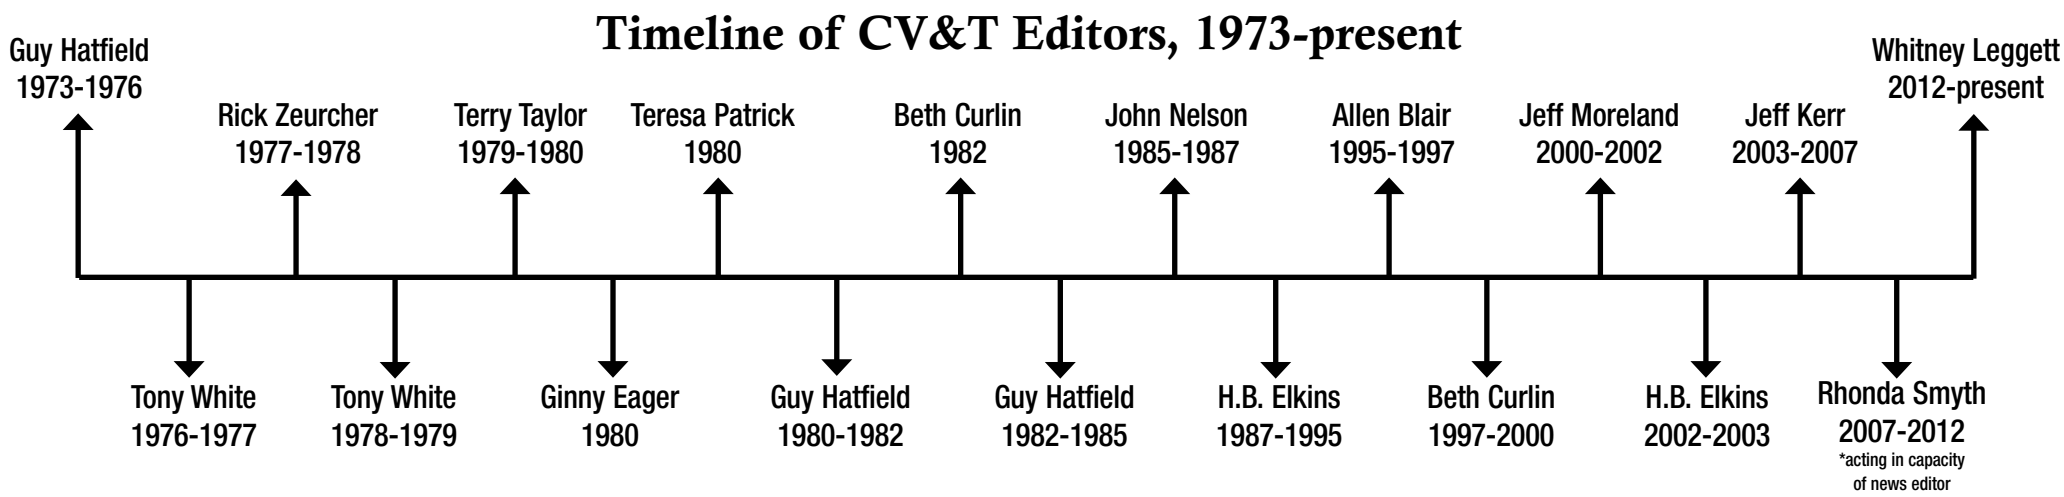

Eventually, though, Teresa was faced with hiring new staff members and dealing with the ever-changing industry and office atmosphere.

However, among all the change, one thing has remained constant: Teresa’s desire to continue her late husband’s legacy.

“I will never be able to fill his shoes,” she said. “But, on the other hand, I think he would be surprised to see how well I’ve done. I just wanted to keep something Guy had worked so hard to build.”

During her time as publisher, Teresa married Roger Barger, a magistrate in Madison County. She has also watched as her and Guy’s three children: Tina, Traci and John, who have all worked for the paper at one point, moved on to start their own families and careers. She and Guy have four grandchildren.

Teresa, who was raised in Estill County, is the daughter of the late Donald Wright and Shirley Wright, who still lives on Pea Ridge.

ANNIVERSARY

Although the names have changed, the times are different and the newspaper industry is shifting in a new direction everyday, the mission of the CV&T has been the same since 1973: to provide the best possible news coverage of Irvine, Ravenna and Estill County.

The premiere issue of the paper, which was then called The Citizen Voice, was published on Jan. 17, 1973. The office was located at 712 Main Street, Ravenna, the site of the former Griffin Building which had been destroyed in the tornado in 1961.

The paper was run by a three-person staff. Guy Hatfield acted as publisher and editor. His brother, Larry Hatfield, was the managing editor and photographer and Marsha Bonny Hughes served as the advertising manager.

In an article introducing the new publication and its staff, Hatfield, who was Kentucky's youngest publisher at the time, told his readers his mission.

"We at The Citizen Voice hope to offer the most extensive and comprehensive coverage of Estill County news blended with features on some of the people and things that make our community unique," he said.

Readers who picked up the paper that day could have read about local boy scouts being honored with a dinner and those filing for local office. The top story told that Leon Prewitt was the first to file to run for the office of County Judge. And, in a tradition that still stands today, the paper included a feature about a local person of interest.

Guy Hatfield wrote the first feature piece for the paper about Gerald Dozier. The article titled "Neither rain, nor snow, nor sleet, nor gloom of the night shall keep Gerald Dozier from ticketing your car," was about a local officer who acted as Irvine's "meter maid." Dozier, who was 45 at the time the article printed, was quoted saying, "I'm just doing my job when someone gets a ticket."

When The Citizen Voice started, it competed with the Irvine Times-Herald which was formed by a 1968 merge of The Irvine Times and The Estill Herald.

Just a few years later, in 1975, Hatfield purchased the Times-Herald. For several months he continued to publish both newspapers.

But, on Jan. 15, 1976, he announced that he would be merging the papers to develop the Citizen Voice & Times.

The first issue of the merged newspaper could have been purchased for 10 cents. A one year subscription in the county cost only $5.25. It also featured a column from Hatfield's longtime friend, Charlie VanHuss.

In the years that followed, the CV&T, its publisher and its staff would experience a number of trials and triumphs.

Guy Hatfield

In 1980, the offices in Ravenna caught fire, forcing the staff to adjust to changes, including putting out several issues at another newspaper's facility. In May of that year Hatfield moved his newspaper into the old Colonial Hotel building on Court Street where the CV&T offices remain today.

In 1998, Hatfield served as Kentucky Press Association president. During his term he visited every newspaper in the state. He was named a Most Valuable Member of KPA after serving on the board for 13 years and in 2001, he was inducted into the University of Kentucky Journalism Alumni Association Hall of Fame.

No matter his awards or accomplishments, it has been said Hatfield remained focused on the purpose of his paper: to serve the community.

Today, Hatfield's widow publishes the paper with the same goal.

Teresa Hatfield-Barger has been publisher of the CV&T since her husband passed away in February 2005. She was watched as staff and editors have come and gone, and come back again... often to leave a second time. She has been at the forefront of pushing the small weekly paper in the direction of digital media.

In 2006 she helped establish the newspaper's first website.

With over 500 Kentucky Press Awards, the paper continues to strive to be an outstanding weekly publication. The success of the paper would not have been possible without the continuous support of its readers.

Today, the staff and the community celebrate 40 years of remarkable journalism and look ahead to many more.

It's that time again! Election for city officials, plus state senator and representative, will take place this year. It has been some surprise that 18 have already filed for county offices. Only three Democrats have filed while 15 Republicans have thrown their hats into the ring.

Birth of a newspaper

Estill County's first new newspaper in 45 years, The Citizen Voice, today commences weekly publication. The Citizen Voice plans to provide complete coverage of events in and around Estill County.

"Neither rain, nor snow, nor sleet, nor gloom of night shall keep Gerald Dozier from ticketing your car"

"I'm just doing my job when someone gets a ticket," comments Gerald Dozier, 45, Irvine's own "meter maid."

Gerald Dozier is a regular policeman for the City of Irvine, but doesn't do anything but make rounds of parking meters.

When asked if he had arresting powers, he said he had a badge but he never had arrested anyone.

Editor's Note:

Today marks four decades since Guy Hatfield published the first issue of The Citizen Voice. The paper, now known as the Citizen Voice & Times, has been serving Estill County for forty years. Although, Hatfield has passed away, his dream and ambition for the paper has not. His widow, Teresa Hatfield-Barger, took on the huge task of running the paper after his death. With no formal journalism education and the help of a number of qualified and outstanding journalists, Teresa has managed to keep two rural newspapers (she also publishes the Clay City Times) up and running despite a troublesome newspaper industry. I am personally proud to follow a long line of editors who have gone on to become some of Kentucky's finest journalists. As we celebrate this milestone in local journalism, we have guest columns from two former editors. As these men remember their time at the CV&T, I ask our readers to also reflect on what the CV&T has meant to this community over the years. This is a milestone not only for the CV&T staff, but for the community as well. From the staff to our readers: Happy 40th Anniversary!

Whitney Leggett,
CV&T News Editor

Former editor remembers CV&T as platform for professional growth

My gold 1968 Mercury Cougar had just one headlight — showing, that is. It really had two, but one was useless because the fancy hydraulic covers hiding the lights when they weren't on were only half working. In the daytime, it looked as if the car was winking at you. So much for the technology of the day.

Thank goodness my first trip to Estill County in the summer of 1973 was during the daylight hours. I parked in front of a gazebo across from The Citizen Voice offices, a pair of disaster relief trailers connected by a wooden walkway and placed on an empty lot in Ravenna. Two older men sat in the gazebo whittling, watching the coal trains go by behind them, and staring down the strange young man in bell-bottom jeans, a beard and hair down to his shoulders as he crossed the street and entered the newspaper office.

JOHN NELSON
CV&T Editor 1985-1987

An hour or so later, I would accept my first job as a reporter at a newspaper in its first year of operation. In the years to follow, I would marry a local girl, become a father, buy my first house, change professions and graduate from college. But always, there was the constant yearning for the newspaper business, and I would return to that same newspaper, by then the Citizen Voice & Times, as its editor in 1985. The office had moved into an old hotel in downtown Irvine.

Publisher Guy Hatfield and I had a complicated relationship. We often agreed on the ends, seldom on the means, but we held a mutual respect and worked well together on the really important things. I admired his business acumen and his strong desire to produce a quality product, to be a watchdog of local government and to stand his ground when the situation called for that. He liked to whine about money, but he was generous and caring to his staff when it really counted. He loved the business more than anyone I have ever known.

Our disagreements could be public and loud, however, and we parted company twice on less than graceful terms. But on both occasions we made our peace, maintaining amicable and valuable contact until his death. In many ways, our relationship represented the necessary friction between politics and journalism, and we learned together from that symbiosis.

Guy provided the platform for my professional growth. In just a few short years at the the Citizen Voice & Times, more news unfolded and more issues were addressed than any young reporter could have anticipated. It remains the most valuable training ground of all my experience. I learned the ins and outs of local government, the complicated problems of business and banking, discovered the strain of serious crime on a small community, and the pain that comes from loss. And I found the courage to face the wrath of those who felt wronged by the job we had to do, even from friends and acquaintances.

Rural journalists were at the forefront of technological change as well, and Guy was leading the way, ready and willing to provide the tools that advanced our mission, especially if it meant saving money. But he was willing also to be the guinea pig for the rest of the industry if he was convinced the gamble would be worth it. It was. We were among the first to buy Apple computers and build our newspaper with desktop publishing. It was the beginning of the end to typewriters and carbon paper, photographic chemicals and wax, scissors and layout tables, and film and darkrooms. And just think, we hadn't even heard of the Internet.

The car I drove into Estill County that summer 40 years ago doesn't resemble anything available today. And the newsroom I walked into would make a nice addition to any museum. My hair is short and gray, my beard is gone and bell-bottoms are out of style. Still there, however, still the same, is the mission of a rural newspaper.

Congratulations, Teresa. We're all proud to have been a part of the CV&T. And thanks Whitney, for remembering to look back as you move forward.

CV&T has been, still is a testament to Hatfield's dedication

Four decades ago, when the first issue of The Citizen Voice was published, I was an 11-year-old sixth grader in Lee County.

Ten years later, when I had just earned my bachelor's degree in journalism and was beginning work on my master's, Guy Hatfield had already bought out the established competitor and the Citizen Voice & Times had earned a reputation as being one of the best weekly newspapers in Kentucky.

Four years after that, I took the chance I was offered to become a part of that legacy

H.B. ELKINS
CV&T Editor
1987-1995, 2002-2003

when I became editor of the paper. Eight years later, I decided to move on to a career outside journalism, but fate brought me back for a couple more years with the CV&T before other opportunities opened up that I felt I needed to pursue.

The time I spent with the CV&T was great for professional development and accomplishment, and I made a lot of lifetime friends, both among my co-workers and in the community. I have relationships with Estill Countians that I'll always value.

The newspaper business has changed a lot since 1973 and the CV&T has always been at the forefront of those changes.

At a time when most weekly newspapers were still using phototypesetting equipment, Guy was one of the first to convert to desktop publishing using Macintosh computers. I had to learn desktop publishing on the fly when I joined the staff in 1987. Our most powerful computer had two megabytes of memory and a 40-megabyte external hard drive. You read that right. Megabytes, not gigabytes. My iPhone has infinitely more computing power than the computers we used back then, and it costs about 10 percent of what one of those high-end Macintosh Pluses did. (And how do I use that computing power? By shooting birds at pigs!)

When I came back into the Hatfield fold in 2001 to edit the Clay City Times, cut-and-paste layout was giving way to pagination, which is the art of laying out newspaper pages entirely on the computer. That was another learning curve, and was yet another area where the CV&T was ahead of its peers in the Kentucky weekly newspaper world.

The Internet was beginning to become a major player in the world of news delivery and Guy always wondered how to embrace that medium without, as he put it, "giving away our news content for free."

His death came before Facebook and Twitter rose to prominence and before people started carrying smartphones so they have instant access to the world at their fingertips, but no doubt he'd approve of the way the CV&T is using the Internet to promote itself today.

Just last week, I ran into one of my mentors, Keith Kappes. Now retired from his career in public relations and administration and the teacher of an occasional journalism course at Morehead State University, Keith is currently the publisher of The Morehead News. He said he thoroughly enjoyed the journalism side of the community newspaper business, but wasn't so keen on the business end of things.

On the other hand, Guy seemed to thrive at both. He enjoyed landing a big advertising account as much as printing a blockbuster news story.

Even back around the turn of the century, and it certainly seems odd to be typing that phrase, Guy realized that the newspaper business was changing. Dailies were already beginning to feel the effects of the proliferation of other news sources, such as 24-hour television news channels and talk radio. He surmised that while dailies might be in trouble, there would always be a market for community newspapers. They provide a service to the public that can't be obtained anywhere else.

When he started the paper, Guy did a lot of the work himself. His health problems took their toll, especially with his vision, so he began hiring journalists to do the bulk of the writing, photography and layout. That didn't stop him from penning the occasional column or editorial when he felt strongly about something, but by and large he left the news business to his editors and staffers.

"You concentrate on putting out the best newspaper possible, and I'll worry about keeping the bills paid," he often said.

He had a knack for finding and hiring talented journalists. I was first offered the job in 1985, two years prior to when I actually started at the CV&T, but I turned it down because I didn't think I was ready to take on that much responsibility as a recent college graduate.

When the chance came again in 1987, I jumped at it. I felt I was capable of doing the job and I was ready for a change.

I had big shoes to fill. I was succeeding John Nelson, who was leaving to start a newspaper in Somerset. John had taken the paper's reputation to a higher plane in news coverage and the paper had the Kentucky Press Association awards to prove it.

It took me about a year to grow into the job, but once I did I feel like the tradition continued. There were a lot of big stories during my tenure, and there were other times when we struggled to fill the front page with local news. Such is life in a small town. In one particularly newsworthy week, when a local businessman was fighting high-profile criminal charges and the fiscal court was embroiled in a controversy over budget and tax issues, Guy cracked, "We need two front pages this week."

Both times after I left, Guy stayed in touch. Sometimes he'd seek my advice and counsel on things, which was really flattering. I called him the day before he died to see how he was doing, not knowing what was going to happen the next day. He sounded weak and didn't feel like talking, which was out of character for him, but he thanked me for calling.

I mentioned the talented people who have worked for the CV&T through the years. I could never name them all, and would not want to try for fear of offending someone by leaving them out, but all have made their mark professionally and in my life personally. Many have become great friends. Until Rhonda Smyth broke my record, I held the mark as the longest-serving editor. I still stay in touch with her, along with many others.

Even among community newspapers, independents are becoming a dying breed. More and more are being bought out by chains. That the CV&T and Clay City Times are still independently owned is a testament to Guy Hatfield's legacy and Teresa Hatfield-Barger's efforts in continuing the tradition.

The paper is in good hands with its new editor, Whitney Leggett, and her efforts to commemorate the 40th anniversary of the beginning of the little paper in Ravenna are to be applauded.

In many ways, September 1987 seems like yesterday to me. It doesn't seem possible that the current editor wasn't even born when I first came to work there. It also seems odd that in my current job, I'm now on the receiving end of calls from the CV&T seeking information for a story, instead of being the one making those calls.

Happy 40th anniversary to the Citizen Voice & Times. I feel honored to have had a role in a quarter of the paper's existence.

LIFESTYLE

An active life is a healthier one

By LISA BICKNELL
CV&T Staff Writer

Cold, wet weather can really test the resolve of those who’ve decided to get more exercise this year. Fortunately, there are ways to work in some active time without wading mud or freezing to death. There’s a nice gym in town, and the central office gym is open to walkers. Body Fitness classes have resumed there, and Zumba classes are taught at Estill Springs Elementary. Last week I pulled out an old Jane Fonda workout video, one I used when our girls were small. I had to laugh at the big hair, high-cut leotards and high-top tennis shoes that Fonda and her crew were sporting, but I still got a good workout. Say what you will about ol’ Hanoi Jane, but she knows how to lead an exercise class. Jane is 75 now, and she looks fantastic. She openly admits she’s had “work” done, but “work” on her face couldn’t possibly replace the obvious care she takes to keep herself fit. I don’t believe it’s simply vanity that drives her. It’s been said a million times in a million ways, but exercise is one of the most important ways to increase our health and well-being. Jane Fonda is a good example of how it can keep us younger than our years. In our modern world of convenient technologies, we’re more likely to rust out than wear out. Prevention.com says SeDS is the scientific term coined by Professor Frank Booth, PhD, for “rusting out.” The term covers a range of disorders and disease that go along with a sedentary lifestyle and it’s the second greatest threat to public health, right behind tobacco use. High blood pressure, diabetes, cancer and heart disease are potentially deadly side effects of being inactive, but lack of exercise also contributes to chronic disabling conditions which range from arthritis pain to digestive problems. As I’ve mentioned before, there are several dimensions of wellness, with physical fitness being one of the most obvious ones. If our bodies don’t feel good, then it’s likely our social, spiritual, intellectual, emotional and occupational selves will suffer too. Most of us know these things, but sometimes it’s still hard to get moving. I have found that once I do, my energy level actually increases. It doesn’t take a lot of exercise to reap health benefits. Some sources say that 30 minutes a day are enough to maintain good health, but an hour a day is better if we are trying to lose weight.

For some, it’s a real challenge to find that much time to exercise, but there are ways of sneaking it in throughout the day. It’s OK to break our active times up into 10 or 15 minute blocks. We can make small changes that make a difference, like taking the stairs whenever possible or parking at the distant end of the grocery store parking lot and walking a little further. We can crank up some music and mop the floors with gusto. If we have a desk job we can make it a point to get up and move around for a few minutes each hour. Exercise improves our blood circulation and our heart and lung function. It increases our energy level and relieves symptoms of depression and anxiety. Exercise regulates our appetite and improves our mood. It helps our digestion system to work better and keeps our joints working freely. I’ve recently found that drinking at least a couple of quarts of water each day makes exercise easier. I don’t get as tired and my joints aren’t popping and cracking like they were. I’m amazed at how much better my skin is looking and feeling since I’ve been drinking more water. My hands have been so dry and old-looking for the past couple of years and my legs got so itchy and scaly in the winter. I hadn’t really felt thirsty, so I blamed my alligator hide on hormones. However, I’ve seen a real change since drinking more water and less sweet tea. Some folks say they don’t like the taste of water, and I’ll have to admit I’m not particularly wild about it myself, but water is more than a beverage; it is a nutrient that our body requires to function. You get used to it after a while, and in my case, it’s made me feel better, which motivates me to continue drinking more. I hope those New Year’s Resolutions are coming along. If you’ve begun to falter, remember tomorrow is a brand new day and it’s never too late to try again. Have a good week!

Budget checkup: 5 tips to fine-tune your finances

With a new year in full swing, self-evaluation is likely a common theme in many U.S. households. In this frame of mind, many families are likely to assess spending and saving habits, crafting a plan for better budgeting. When was the last time you took a serious look at your budget? If you’re due for a checkup, a number of tools and tips exist to help guide you through the budgeting process. You can find resources online, like budget worksheets that allow you to plug in your income and expenses and determine where there is room for adjustment. These are available for free to those who take the AllyWalletWise.com budget course. The following five tips can help you create a budget that works for you:

- Envision the finish line: It’s hard to start a race without knowing where and when you will end. Decide on a financial goal—a big purchase you want to make, a debt you’d like to pay off or a savings fund goal—and use this as a motivational tool to commit to a budget.
- Put pen to paper: To best understand your current financial landscape, begin with a big-picture view. List household income, expenses and savings goals in an organized document (whether written or online). Don’t try to budget in your head.

- Balance your budget: Are you keeping expenses proportionate? Typically, housing costs should not account for more than one-third of your monthly take-home pay, while transportation costs should account for less than 20 percent, and savings between 5 percent and 10 percent.
- Dig up deals: You can easily “find” more money in your budget by cutting down on current expenses. First, identify which parts of your budget are considered wants-versus needs—and whether you’re willing to cut them out. Then look online for discounts and to review various service providers, like cell phone and cable, to see if any better deals are available.
- Aim for weekly check-ins: Decide who should be involved in the budgeting process and meet on a weekly basis to review finances, which will help you stay on track and remain accountable. Don’t wait until the end of the month, when making fixes will be harder. And remember, a sound budget requires regular review, since financial situations can change and unexpected events can occur.

Learn More: For information on basic budgeting guidelines or to take a free online budgeting course, visit Ally

Bank’s financial education website, Wallet Wise, at www.AllyWalletWise.com. When planning your budget, separate the “wants” from the “needs.”

Mole control in Lawns

Eric Baker
Agriculture Agent

Many community lawns are showing damage from various nuisance animals, especially moles. The first step in controlling moles is to actually determine if a mole is the culprit. Because moles are insectivores, they do not routinely eat garden seeds and bulbs, although they are often blamed. The real culprits are probably voles, white-footed mice, or house mice. If your garden and lawn has underground runways in it, the moles are there looking for insects and earthworms. Moles do play a beneficial role in the management of soil and in the control of undesirable grubs and insects. By tunneling and shifting soil particles, moles permit better aeration of soil, aid in drying out sod, and allow humus (organic matter) to travel deeper into the soil. This tunneling also allows subsoil material to be moved closer to the surface where nutrients may be more available to plant roots. Perhaps the mole’s greatest crime is the nuisance it creates in lawns and gardens. The runs can damage turf and cause uneven surfaces. If you have this problem, mole baits with bromethalin are breakthrough products in the battle against moles. They work where grain baits, repellents, and a myriad of home remedies have failed. It was tested on different mole species, soil types and baiting conditions throughout the country before receiving approval from the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) for use on lawns and gardens. Shaped like a mole’s natural food choices, earthworms and grubs, this product has shown great success in controlling moles. You can find the bait at hardware stores and farm supply stores. Brand names include Talpirid Mole Bait and Tomcat Mole Killer. Moles usually die in their tunnels within 12-24 hours of ingesting the bait. One hint is to make sure you find an active mole run to put the bait into or it may not be found by the mole. See the product label for more information.

For more problem wildlife control information, contact the Estill County Extension Service at 723-4557.

Fruit tree rootstock, berry plants, and more

The Estill Extension Service will be taking orders for apple and pear rootstocks this month. If you want to propagate a favorite apple or pear, grafting is one of the easiest ways to preserve that cultivar. To graft, you will need scion wood (terminal branch segments from last year’s growth collected at the end of February) and a rootstock. If you do not know how to graft, come by the office for information or assistance. We typically order Malling 7 (55 percent of standard size) and/or MM.111 (80 percent of standard) semi-dwarf apple rootstock and a pear rootstock. Please place your order on or before Jan. 28 by calling 606-723-4557. The rootstocks usually arrive by the first week of March. Orders must be prepaid by Feb. 22. In addition, we are taking orders for strawberry, blackberry, blueberry, raspberry, and asparagus plants. Call our office for details. Plant delivery will be in early April. If you are interested, call our office at 723-4557. Orders must be prepaid by March 15.

Readers’ Recipes

Baked Beans

1 ½ cups navy, kidney or lima beans, dry, sorted and rinsed
2 cups water
2 cups apple juice
1 tsp. salt
2 Tbsp. molasses
½ cup ketchup
2 tsp. vinegar
1 tsp. dried mustard
Combine apple juice and water. Bring to a boil. Add beans, and simmer for 2 ½ hours until beans are tender. Drain beans, reserve the liquid. Put beans and other ingredients in greased baking dish. Cover and bake at 250 degrees for 3 to 4 hours. Uncover the last hour of baking, and add some reserved liquid if beans become dry. Yield: 6 servings.

Cabbage Rolls

Patty Neal, Clay City

12 Cabbage leaves
¼ cup milk
1 egg, beaten
1/3 cup tapioca
1 lb. ground beef

1 chopped onion
1 tsp. parsley
1 tsp. salt
½ tsp. pepper
1 (24 oz.) can tomato sauce
6 tsp. sugar
3 tsp. Worcestershire sauce
Cook leaves 4 to 5 minutes until limp; drain. Combine milk, egg and tapioca; stir well. Mix beef, onion, parsley, salt and pepper in a large bowl. Add milk and egg mixture; mix well. Put mixture in cabbage leaf. Roll and secure with toothpick. Place in slow cooker. Mix tomato sauce, sugar and Worcestershire Sauce. Pour over cabbage rolls. Cook 2 hours on high or 4 to 6 hours on low.

English Muffin Veggie Pizza

4 English muffins
1 cup pizza or spaghetti sauce
½ cup shredded, part-skim mozzarella cheese
1 cup cooked chopped broccoli
3 Tbsp. shredded carrots
1 tsp. grated parmesan cheese
Cut four English muffins in half. Toast the eight muffin halves. Spoon two tablespoons pizza sauce over each English muffin half. Sprinkle one tablespoon mozzarella cheese on top of each half. Put two tablespoons broccoli and one teaspoon carrots on top of each half. Sprinkle each half with parmesan cheese. Broil in oven for two minutes, until cheese melts. Yield: 4 servings.

Miniature Cheese Cakes

Patty Neal, Clay City

2 (8 oz.) pkgs. cream cheese, softened
¼ tsp. vanilla
1 box Vanilla Wafers
2 large eggs
½ cup sugar
Mini foil baking cups
1 can of blueberry or cherry pie filling
Beat the cream cheese until smooth. Add the eggs, sugar and vanilla. Beat well five minutes. Put baking cups into cup cake pans. Place a vanilla wafer in each cup. Fill 2/3 full with cream cheese mixture. Bake 15 minutes. Cool, then refrigerate. When ready to serve, top with pie filling. Makes about 20.

Jumble Word Contest

ENCOURAGING WORD: A DAY OF PRAYER FOR THE NATION

Howard Coop
Guest Columnist

When we pledge allegiance to the flag of the United States of America, we should, in all sincerity, pledge allegiance to “one nation under God,” and when the person elected to the high office of President of the United States takes the Oath of Office, he ends that historic oath with: “So help me God.” The ending of that significant oath should be more, much more, than merely repeating words; it would be a sincere and heart-felt prayer for guidance to God under whom this nation exists and has prospered since its founding.

Sunday, Jan. 20, 2013, the day before the presidential inauguration, should be a special day for every American citizen who loves this land. That day has been designated as a special “Day of Prayer for the Nation.”

Concerned citizens of this land who care about their beloved country are asked to unite in this special observance and pray sincerely in their own way asking for divine guidance for our nation and its leaders at this crucial point in human history. Some think, and they have good reason for doing so, that our beloved country in which there is, and has been, freedom and independence is drifting in the wrong direction. By many, God has been excluded from the public sector. As a result, the United States is becoming a secular nation in which moral standard are less and less important. Too, it has been suggested that the USA (United States of America) is moving in the direction of becoming the USSA (United Socialist States of America) for the political ideology of some leaders appears to be rooted in Marxism which is the foundational basis of communism.

For centuries, we have lived with the confident assurance that “effectual fervent prayer” is “powerful and effective.” Therefore, when citizens of any nation “humble themselves and pray,” something significant that is healing and restorative happens in the land. When citizens of a nation are united in sincere prayer for the land they cherish, better things will be ahead.

NOTICE OF SALE

By virtue of Judgment and Order of Sale by the Estill Circuit Court in the above cause, I will, on Friday, February 1, 2013 at the hour of 9:30 a.m., at the Courthouse door in Irvine, Estill County, Kentucky, offer the respective interests of the above parties in the following described properties for sale at public auction, to-wit:

Property Address: 261 Main Street, Irvine, KY 40336

A certain parcel of real property together with the two-story residence and other improvements thereon, said lot being 80 feet in width and 150 feet in depth, situated, lying and being on Main Street in the City of Irvine, Kentucky, known as the David Bergman property, more definitely described as follows:

Bounded on the south by the property of Carl Wilson (now Marcum), on the east by Main Street, on the north by the property of R.L. McLemore and on the west by the alley running from Orchard Street to the Irvine-Richmond Turnpike.

Being the same property conveyed to James Ross, single, by deed dated January 27, 2009 and recorded on February 24, 2009 in Deed Book 277, Page 171 in the Office of the Estill County Clerk.

Subject to any and all applicable restrictive covenants, existing easements, utility easement, right-of-way, provisions of applicable zoning statutes and ordinances, and rules and regulations of the Department of Health, if any. Also regulation that might apply thru planning & zoning.

The above described property shall be sold upon the following terms and conditions:

- The purchaser shall take the sale real estate free and clear of the claims of the parties to this action, but it shall be sold subject to the following:
 - current year (2013) ad valorem real estate taxes affecting the real estate for which the purchaser shall take no credit on the purchase price;
 - easements, restrictions, and stipulations of record;
 - any current assessments for public improvements levied against the property; and
 - any matters which would be disclosed by an accurate survey or inspection of the property.
- The sale shall be made to the highest and best bidder or bidders. The successful bidder shall pay cash or make a deposit of one-third (1/3rd) of the purchase price, with the balance on credit for thirty (30) days. Any purchaser, other than the Plaintiff, who does not pay cash in full, shall be required to execute a bond, with surety thereon acceptable to the Master Commissioner to secure the unpaid balance of the purchase price and sale bond shall bear interest at the rate of 12% per annum from the date of sale until paid, and shall have the same force and effect as a judgment and shall remain and be a lien on the property until paid. The purchasers shall have the privilege of paying all of the balance of the purchase price prior to the expiration of the thirty (30) day period.
- The successful bidder at sale, at bidder's own expense, may carry fire and extended insurance coverage on the improvements from the date of sale until the purchase price is fully paid, in an amount at least sufficient to cover a loss to the extent of the court appraised value of the improvements on the real estate or the unpaid balance of the purchase price is fully paid, in the amount whichever is less, with the loss payable clause to the Master Commissioner. Failure of the purchaser to effect such insurance coverage shall not affect the validity of the sale or the purchaser's liability there under, but shall entitle, but not require, any party adjudicated an interest in the real estate, after giving notice to the Master Commissioner, to effect said insurance and furnish evidence of the policy to the Master Commissioner. The premium of the insurance policy shall then be charged to the purchaser as purchaser's cost.
- In the event the Plaintiff becomes the purchaser of the real estate at the Master Commissioner's sale, and it the Plaintiff's bid if less than its lien adjudged herein, Plaintiff may comply with the terms of sale by taking credit upon this Judgment without making the cash deposit or execution the sale bond as provided for in this Judgment.

- The sale shall be made to the highest and best bidder or bidders. The successful bidder shall pay cash or make a deposit of ten percent (10%) of the purchase price, with the balance on credit for thirty (30) days. Any purchaser, other than the Plaintiff, who does not pay cash in full, shall be required to execute a bond, with surety thereon acceptable to the Master Commissioner to secure the unpaid balance of the purchase price and sale bond shall bear interest at the rate of 12% per annum from the date of sale until paid, and shall have the same force and effect as a judgment and shall remain and be a lien on the property until paid. The purchasers shall have the privilege of paying all of the balance of the purchase price prior to the expiration of the thirty (30) day period.
- The successful bidder at sale, at bidder's own expense, may carry fire and extended insurance coverage on the improvements from the date of sale until the purchase price is fully paid, in an amount at least sufficient to cover a loss to the extent of the court appraised value of the improvements on the real estate or the unpaid balance of the purchase price is fully paid, in the amount which-ever is less, with the loss payable clause to the Master Commissioner. Failure of the purchaser to effect such insurance coverage shall not affect the validity of the sale or the purchaser's liability there under, but shall entitle, but not require, any party adjudicated an interest in the real estate, after giving notice to the Master Commissioner, to effect said insurance and furnish evidence of the policy to the Master Commissioner. The premium of the insurance policy shall then be charged to the purchaser as purchaser's cost.
- In the event the Plaintiff becomes the purchaser of the real estate at the Master Commissioner's sale, and it the Plaintiff's bid if less than its lien adjudged herein, Plaintiff may comply with the terms of sale by taking credit upon this Judgment without making the cash deposit or execution the sale bond as provided for in this Judgment.

61% of Kentuckians say, of all media, newspapers are their primary source for advertising information.

13% mentioned another medium as their primary source.

That's a 4½-to-1 advantage for newspapers.

Local woman credits faith, support for 100-pound weight loss

By LISA BICKNELL
CV&T Staff Writer

On Jan. 3, 2012, Susan Luster Lynch set her head to do something about her weight problem.

She had gone to the doctor the day before, and her doctor “told me I was taking myself to an early grave.”

“I was pre-diabetic, had high blood pressure and I was obese,” Susan said. “I just bawled.” She weighed 265 pounds.

This sobering reminder was enough to prompt Susan to make some changes.

“I have a son, 11 years old at the time, and I wanted to be around to see him grow up,” she said. “I knew I was going to have to change.”

Change she did. She gave up three sweet teas a day from McDonald’s. She cut out most fast food.

“I started eating what I call ‘clean food,’” Susan said. “I ate fresh veggies and fruit and lean chicken and meats. I was very strict with myself.”

When Susan went back to her doctor for a follow-up appointment one month later, she’d lost 23 pounds.

“Something just clicked inside me then,” she said. “I’m very goal-oriented, so this just motivated me.”

In February, Susan joined Everybody’s Gym in Irvine.

“They were so good to help me with everything,” said Susan. “I was scared at first, but they showed me how to use the equipment.”

“Now I’m an elliptical junkie. I do five miles a day about five times a week,” she said. “At first, I could only do about 45 seconds.”

Susan stops by the gym for a workout on the elliptical machine each day before work.

“When I get done, I feel charged up for the day,” she said. “I feel like I’ve done something.”

Last November, Susan walked in her first 5K and even jogged part of the way. She hopes to run in the Mushroom Festival 5K this spring.

“Food used to be my fix,” Susan said. “Now it’s exercise.”

Susan said she has always had weight issues.

“I’ve always been a big girl,” she said.

She recalls having to wear a size 14 women’s dress when she was a flower girl in her sister’s wedding. She was 11.

“That broke my heart,” she said.

On Jan. 3, 2013, Susan reached her goal of losing 100 pounds. She credits a lot of people with supporting her throughout her journey.

“My husband has been amazing,” she said. “He says all the time, ‘I’m so proud of you.’”

Susan said her church family has been supportive, her coworkers and even her customers.

Many people know Susan as one of the friendly girls who work at the Methodist store on Richmond Road. She’s been an employee there since 2002.

“At Christmas, some of our customers brought treats in,” she said. “They brought sweets for the others, but fruit for me.”

Susan also gives credit to God for helping her stay strong.

“I have held on to two verses that have really helped me through this,” she said. “They are Philippians 4:13 and Philippians 1:6.”

Another important part of Susan’s weight-loss journey has been her journal.

“I’ve recorded my diet, my water, my exercise...everything,” she said. “Whenever I get stuck, I go back to the beginning to see what I was doing then.”

The weight hasn’t always come off easily.

“One time I was stuck for two months,” she said. “I only lost one pound. That was hard.”

About six months ago, Susan decided to go public with her weight-loss journey. She started a blog on Facebook and called it “Susan’s 100-pound Journey.”

On her site, she posts daily tips and encouraging words for those striving to get slim and healthy.

For a long time, Susan only had a couple of hundred followers, but in the past few weeks, word has begun to spread. Currently, over 1,300 people have liked her page.

People often want to know how she eats now.

“I usually fry an egg in a nonstick skillet, and eat it on two slices of 35-calorie bread with a slice of cheese,” she said. “Or I sometimes eat scrambled eggs in a wrap with a bit of salsa for flavoring.”

When she’s working, she usually has a Wendy’s grilled chicken sandwich for lunch.

For supper, she modifies whatever she’s cooking for the rest of her family to be lower in fat and calories.

“I have a growing boy. I can’t expect him to eat like I do,” she said.

She substitutes ground turkey for ground beef in tacos and chili and she’ll grill her chicken instead of fry it.

“I snack on fruits and vegetables—and Fiber One bars. I think of them as my candy bars because they have chocolate drizzled on them,” Susan laughed.

Another important key to her weight-loss, Susan said, was to “drink water like you breathe oxygen.”

Susan said her son, Travis, is “amazed” by her weight-loss.

“He was excited when he gave me a hug and said, ‘Mom! I can reach all the way around you,’” she said.

She is married to Harm Lynch and they live on a farm on Walton Road. Her parents are Paul and Brenda Luster, and Susan has twin sisters.

Susan said she enjoys physical activity more than she once did. She and her husband take walks together, and they sometimes hunt mushrooms or ginseng in season.

“Last summer we played volleyball in the yard—and I could breathe,” she said.

Susan currently teaches Celebrate Recovery classes at the Body of Christ church on River Drive, where she leads people dealing with “addictions, habits and hurts” through a 12-step Bible based program to help them overcome their problems.

She hopes to soon lead a weight loss class.

“I feel like the Lord is leading me in that direction,” she said.
